Beese & Megan Riordan The Beach's Story We moved to Hilton Head, SC in 2017, after deciding that we wanted to raise our kids in a warm climate. We are both primarily from the northeast, and had a hard time accepting that South Carolina was the actual beach we all signed on for. It was the heat, the humidity, and the lack of serene sandy beaches. Our oldest is in elementary school, and my husband and I wanted something that we could enjoy together and that would help the little one do well in school. The schools in Hilton Head seem so much better than anywhere we have lived. Beach Elementary is part of the public school system in Hilton Head, and there are no private schools in the area. Our year in Hilton Head was a great one. My husband started at the Beach, and our oldest stayed on island even after he graduated from high school. We love the warm weather, and are drawn to the ocean and water in general. Our Beach Neighbors We stayed on the beach and we

What's New in the Strata Photo 3D CX2 Tryout?

The most important feature is its wide range of scanning capabilities. No matter what you want to scan - a sculpture, a vase, a watch, a unique piece of jewelry, a painting, a photo, a fruit, or even a sample of a piece of meat - the utility has you covered. Using computer vision, it is capable of detecting and extracting objects in the image, and then modeling them using its own approximation algorithms. 3D scanning methods. You can scan your object through various methods, from scanning the entire object using the "sphere" method to scanning only a part of it using the "extractor" method. 3D scanning a single object through the "extractor" method is just as easy as scanning it through the "sphere" method, but it gives you more control over the scanning process. First, you determine the scanning area and threshold levels. Then, you define the desired shape of the object to be scanned. Moreover, you can easily control the contrast, the layer, and background colors using the "scan parameters" panel. The most convenient and effective method of scanning is the sphere method. It is quite similar to how a pinhole camera works. In this case, you just place your object on the area that you want to be scanned and the utility will automatically calculate the scanning plane and project its image onto it. The "extractor" method is used when you need to scan a part of the object. First, you place the entire object in its desired area and select the type of scanning method you would like to use. The sphere method will be activated if the area selected is larger than the area that is being projected onto, and it will be deactivated if the area selected is smaller than the area being projected onto. This is convenient because it allows you to decide whether to use the sphere or the extractor method based on how large the area is. For example, when you want to scan a miniature, you can select the "extractor" method and adjust the scanning area to suit your requirements. Importing scanned photos. Scanned photos are also successfully imported to Strata Photo 3D CX2 Tryout. It is possible to import photos from various digital sources, including digital cameras, smart phones, smart phones, and even scanners. This is the process: Select "Photo" as the source of the scan. Choose the folder with scanned photos and click on "Import".
